

Edinburgh SSAGO, Club report, November 2010

So the plan was to complete our 100 pub challenge by the end of the Guide Centenary Year (that's 20/10/2010 if you're a Scout and don't know). So we set about various pub visits. Over the summer we held a Festival pub crawl, where we were only allowed to visit pubs and bars that were not there the rest of the year – we managed quite a few but they were all horribly expensive. Once term started we tried to go to a few more pubs, but sadly we did not make our 100 pub total, only reaching about 85, which was very disappointing.

We held a pioneering event in Freshers week and got a fair few people coming. We also signed up lots of bods at the Freshers Fair onto our mailing list. We headed out to Bonaly campsite for an evening the following week and attempted to build a fire. The fire was somewhat unsuccessful. Liam is a rubbish fire-builder (though he was close to death with a hideous disease at the time). It was still fun though, and we got lots of singing done.

Network organised a Trebuchet building competition, which we contributed a team to. And we won! Ha ha ha ha ha ha ha ha ha.

We also went to a few pub quizzes, and never won.

We wandered round Arthurs Seat to the Sheep's Heid, the oldest pub in Scotland, where we tried and failed to play skittles, so we played Cluedo instead.

We had a rather dramatic trip out to the Aerial Assault course at Ratho. There were panic attacks, road rage, heated debates with staff members, and eventually awesome hanging 100ft above the ground goodness. Then we had cake.

Most recently, we've been making some silly hats.
